

Restaurant Reservation Flow

Screen-by-screen structure for the standard booking and the large-group pre-order journey.

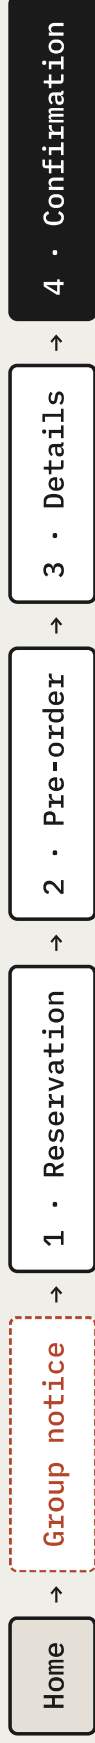

9 screens 2 journeys Desktop + mobile

Two journeys, split by guest count

STANDARD • UP TO 10 GUESTS

GROUP • MORE THAN 10 GUESTS

The menu stays reachable from every step. The booking draft persists, so a guest who leaves to browse returns to the step they left.

SCREEN 01

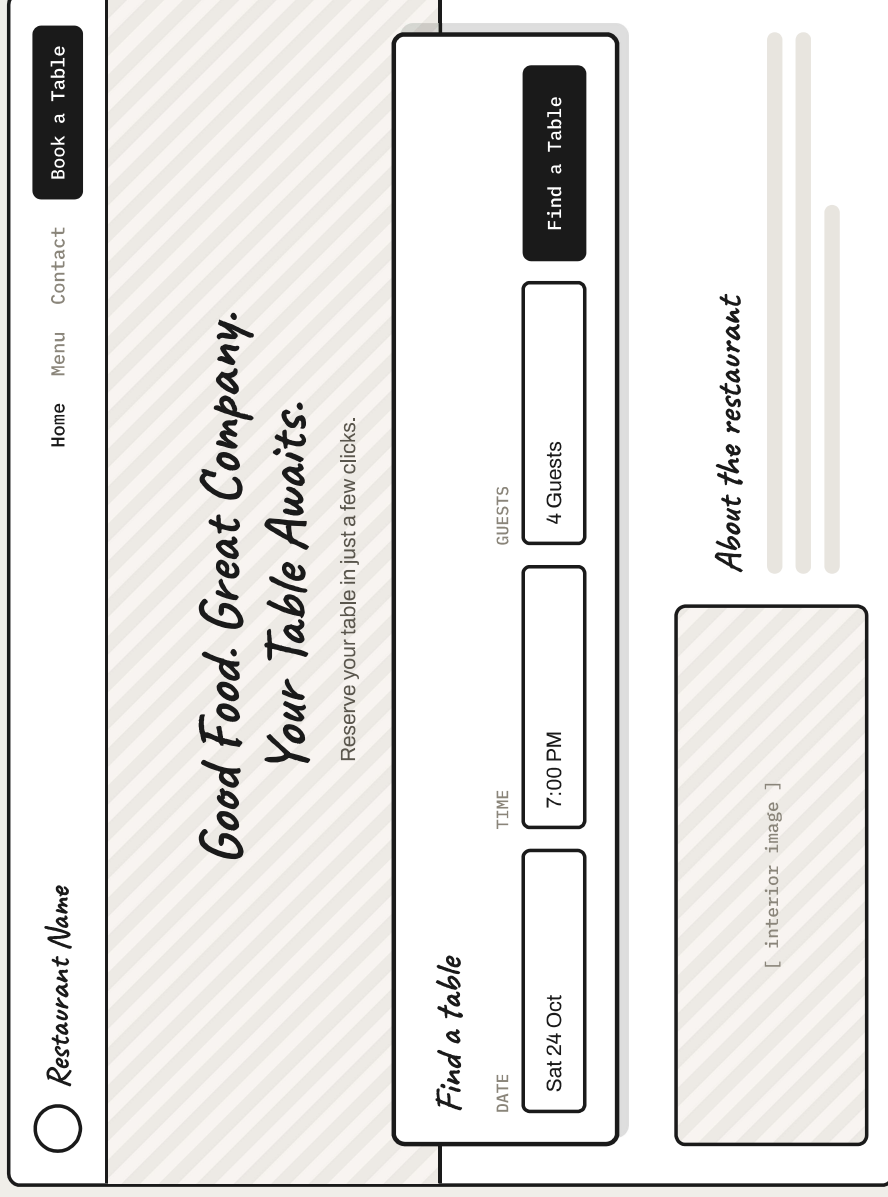

Home

The booking widget overlaps the hero so the primary action never requires a scroll.

Date, time and guests captured in one row.

Guests list ends with “More than 10”, the entry point to the group journey.

Below: about, popular dishes, hours, location, contact.

Date, time and guests

Guests, then date, then time — each choice narrows the one after it.

Unavailable dates and fully booked times are visibly disabled, never hidden.

A running selection summary sits beside the time grid.

Continue stays disabled until a time is chosen.

Explains the requirement and saves the draft so browsing the menu costs nothing.

Group pre-order

The organiser sets quantities for the table — no per-guest selection in this version.

Meals-selected counter tracks progress against head count.

Category chips keep long menus navigable.

“Skip for now” keeps the booking completable in one sitting.

Open questions before high fidelity

01

Is a deposit required for groups?

Payment would add a step between pre-order and confirmation.

02

How firm is the pre-order?

Editable until 48 hours out is assumed, not confirmed.

03

Do guests need accounts?

Currently guest-only, managed by booking reference.

04

Waitlist when fully booked?

Scoped out of v1; the empty state leaves room for it.
